Stephanie Inn Dining Room Undergoes Regal Transformation

World-renowned Stephanie Inn remodels gourmet dining room as the luxury hotel prepares for vacation season in Cannon Beach

CANNON BEACH, Ore. — Owners of the Stephanie Inn, the Oregon coast's premier Four-Diamond resort, announced today the completion of a $100,000 renovation of its gourmet dining room ahead of beach season. The week-long remodel marks the end of phase two of a project to bring contemporary design to the renowned hotel known to attract tourists to the Oregon coast from across the nation and internationally.

Modifications to the dining room centered on color, lighting, fireplace, furniture, tableware and linens, among other room items and accent features.

"We are thrilled to be moving toward a more 'transitional style' that blends traditional charm with more contemporary and fresh design elements. We believe our guests will find this clean, but classic design more enjoyable, aesthetically pleasing and congruent with the rest of the Stephanie Inn experience," said Ryan Snyder, Martin Hospitality President. "Cannon Beach is one of the region's top travel destinations so we are always looking for ways we can improve our guest experience and offer people the finest in luxury dining and lodging," Snyder added.

The dining room's new color scheme showcases a rich palate of Syrah, chocolate and butter cream that is lit by softer, warmer and more reflective lighting. Along the ceiling, inset lights accentuate the antique chandelier at the room's center. Rustic, bronze wall sconces with seeded glass lenses and Edison lights are a striking addition. The room's fireplace was also refinished in a rustic gray stone and features a polished, reclaimed timber mantle that evokes a modern, woodland feeling and pairs well with the custom-designed carpet.

Guests will notice the addition of madrona wood flooring and a maitre d' podium added to the entrance of the dining room. The room now includes two wood hutches near the fireplace used for serving, as well as modern wingback dining room chairs upholstered in custom-designed fabrics. Simple, elegant place settings adorn each table.

O'Brien & Company, a Wilsonville-based contractor specializing in the construction of hospitals, schools, hotels and wineries, led construction efforts. Georgia Pope of Hill Devine designed the dining room interior, from colors and lighting to décor and furnishings.

The Stephanie Inn Dining Room was last renovated in May 2009 when the entire hotel underwent a $5 million renovation to bring more lux stylings and guest services to its list of offerings.

This dining room refresh comes on the heels of Martin Hospitality's half-million dollar renovation of its family-friendly Surfsand Resort, a sister hotel to the Stephanie Inn. Completed in February 2014, the three-month renovation included the remodel of 12 beach-level rooms in the Beachfront Building. Each room on the first floor of the resort now has a patio doors that opens up directly onto the beach, offering guests sweeping views of Haystack Rock and the Pacific Ocean.

The Martin Hospitality parent company owns and operates multiple luxury restaurants and hotels in Cannon Beach and Seaside, including the Stephanie Inn, Surfsand Resort, The Wayfarer Restaurant, The Lumberyard Rotisserie & Grill, and The Cellar, an upscale wine bar at the center of town.

The Stephanie Inn is located at 2740 South Pacific St. For more information about the Stephanie Inn Dining Room and other Martin Hospitality hotels, restaurants and coastal properties, visit <http://explorecannonbeach.com>
